SGA votes for handshake, guest speaker on quad

By David Olds
SGA reporter

The SGA Senate voted 26 to 8 Tuesday to have quad graduation with the traditional student-president handshake and a guest speaker.

Last week, in an informal vote, the senate voted to support quad graduation and keep the handshake. The senate also voted to support sponsoring a party in the Convocation Center the night before graduation.

Senior Bruce MacCall, a member of an ad hoc graduation committee appointed by President Ronald Carrier, said senators' opinions to possible changes in the graduation format are needed. The committee is "open to suggestions," he said.

Commuter Senator Michael Condyles suggested having a receiving line before the ceremony in which students could shake hands with Carrier.

MacCall said, "The problem with the receiving line is it takes too much time and would not shorten the ceremony."

Condyles responded, "It is not mandatory to shake Dr. Carrier's hand in the receiving line." Graduates would not be required to participate in the receiving line — just those students wanting to speak with the president.

The ad hoc committee will discuss possible formats for a shorter ceremony at a meeting Tuesday. The committee must submit recommendations for graduation to Carrier by Nov. 11. Carrier has the final decision concerning the ceremony format.

Banks to force non-registrants to repay loans

By Tammy Scarton
news editor

The names of about 25 students who have not filed selective service forms will be submitted to the federal financial aid lenders if the forms are not completed by Nov. 15.

Most of the students receive guaranteed student loans from banks, said John Sellers, JMU financial aid director.

The banks will send forms and letters to the students stating that if the form is not filed, the loan must be repaid.

number of commuter senators from 13 to 16. Three senators abstained in the voting.

► Huffman Senator Denise Mumley proposed the SGA allocate $559.89 to the Madison Outing Club for equipment. The proposal will be studied by the Finance Committee.

► Chairman pro tempore Mark Barbee proposed the SGA allocate $269.80 to the Wayland Historical Society to travel to lectures in Williamsburg. The proposal will be studied by the Finance Committee.

► Commuter Senator Veronica Bindrim resubmitted a proposal that students with a 3.25 quality point average be permitted to sign their registration and drop-add forms. Freshmen and first-year transfer students would not be included. The proposal was tabled by the senate last week. A formal vote could not be taken at this meeting because there wasn't quorum when the proposal was raised. Because several senators left during the meeting, any proposal raised late in the meeting could not be voted on.

► Curriculum and Instruction Committee Chairwoman Veronica Bindrim raised a bill of opinion stating a student should not be required to complete 32 extra hours to receive a second degree. The bill was passed by a voice vote.

► Mark Barbee presided over the meeting. SGA President Isabel Cumming, Legislative Vice President David Harvey and Administrative Vice President Bob George were attending a conference in New Orleans.

Financial aid

Under federal law, students must have registered with the selective service to receive federal financial aid. The students will be bound legally to repay the loan.

The students could be prosecuted, Sellers said. A student could be charged with receiving money illegally.

Sellers said he does not know the deadline for returning the forms to the banks.

The students did not meet the Oct. 1 deadline for returning the forms to JMU's financial aid office. The Department of Education, who set the deadline, extended it to Nov. 15.

In mid-October, the JMU financial aid office sent letters to about 50 students stating that their selective service forms needed to be returned. About 25 returned the form.

"The letter stated they were not in compliance with the law. They have to sign the form and return it to us," Sellers said. "If we don't get it by

Nov. 15, we're going to notify the lenders — and we're going to do it. This was their last notification.

"They probably don't think they have to turn them in or think they've done it already," he said. "But I don't know how they can think that when we keep sending them letters."

Sellers said the students' records will be placed on hold until the selective service form is filed. A student with a records hold cannot register for classes or receive grades.

Spring semester registration begins Monday.

"They may be able to register, but they won't get their grades," he said. "I can probably do something to keep them from coming back (next semester)," he said. But Sellers said before he takes any action, he will talk with "higher (JMU) authorities."

The students' names also might be submitted to the Department of Education.

Sellers said he has not been officially notified to submit the students' names to the department.

But it is a strong possibility, he said.

JMU fees increase 14 percent

Inflation causes tuition hike

By Bill Goodykoontz
staff writer

Of seven state universities, JMU has the third lowest price for tuition and room and board fees.

But JMU, the College of William and Mary, the University of Virginia, Virginia Tech, Virginia Commonwealth University, Old Dominion University, and Radford University all raised tuition and room and board prices for 1983-84.

Inflation and a decrease in state funding of the education budget at the universities were two major reasons for increases.

At JMU, Virginia residents paid $3,998 this year for room, board, tuition and fees. Non-residents paid $4,928.

Fred Hilton, JMU spokesman, said inflation was a major reason for the tuition increase of 14 percent here this year. "Everything we do costs more," he said.

Another reason was the increase in the amount that students must pay into the education budget. The education budget is funded by state tax revenue and students' tuition.

Last year, students paid 30 percent of the education budget. This year, they paid 32.5 percent.

Tuition here has increased nearly 40 percent the last three years.

Tuition usually increases due to a change in a formula set by the state and adjusted every two years. The formula is used to set the percentage of the education budget that students and the state must pay.

Hilton said the General Assembly changed the formula because they "felt students should pay more" of their education, and the state should pay less.

At Virginia Tech, Virginia residents paid $3,222 this year, a 15.7 percent increase from last year. Non-residents paid $4,797, a 19 percent increase.

Catherine Johnston, budget director at Virginia Tech, said students there paid 35 percent of the education budget — a 2.5 percent increase from last year. This was a major reason for the tuition increase, she said.

Johnston said inflation was another reason for increases at Virginia Tech, as well as the school's responsibility to shoulder more of the fringe benefits of faculty and staff.

These are the standard benefits for state employees, and include Blue Cross-Blue Shield, retirement funds, and sick leave. The state used to pick up the tab for these benefits.

At the College of William and Mary, Virginia residents paid $4,676 this year, a 7.5 percent increase. Non-residents paid $7,590, an 11.9 percent increase. (These prices are the most expensive available at William and Mary. Prices for different housing options vary slightly.)

'Everything we do costs more.'

Fred Hilton university spokesman

"We try to keep the range of Virginia students' (tuition) competitive with our sister institutions" in the state, said Floyd Whitaker, comptroller at William and Mary. He said he thinks Virginia residents should pay less because they pay Virginia taxes.

But he said William and Mary is trying to bring Virginia residents' tuition rates closer to non-residents' rates.

At the University of Virginia, Virginia residents paid $4,230 this year, and non-residents paid $6,410.

Tuition for Virginia residents increased 17.4 percent; non-resident tuition increased 14.9 percent. Room prices, which are the same for both Virginia residents and non-residents, went up 10 percent. Board fees, which are also the same for both residents and non-residents, increased 4.7 percent.

Elizabeth Wilkerson, director of information services at UVA, said a major reason for tuition increase there was the fringe benefits the university must fund.

Room and board there also increased largely due to inflation and "covering the cost of new housing being built," Wilkerson said.

At Virginia Commonwealth University, Virginia residents paid $4,220 this year; non-residents paid $5,740.

Room and board increased 6.7 percent, while tuition rose 11.3 percent for Virginia residents and 17.4 percent for non-residents. (These prices are the most expensive available at VCU. Prices for different housing options vary slightly.)

This includes a $51 health charge per semester. No one was available to comment on the increases at VCU.

At Old Dominion University, Virginia residents paid $4,226 this year, a 20 percent increase from last year. Non-residents paid $5,294, a 17.2 percent increase. (These prices are the most expensive available at ODU. Prices for different housing options vary slightly.)

Mike Malone, director of admissions at ODU, said inflation was a major reason for tuition increases there. ODU also has "built a new dorm and renovated two freshmen dorms in the last two years," Malone said. The construction contributed to the cost increase.

At Radford University, Virginia residents paid $3,909 this year, an increase of 10 percent. Non-residents' fees also went up 10 percent, to $4,659.

"Out of necessity we have to increase (tuition)," said Andy Bales, director of admissions at Radford University. He said the primary reasons for increasing prices at Radford are "maintaining the physical plant (cost for electricity, heat, etc.) and maintaining the level of instruction (increasing faculty salaries)."

New computer system to speed entrance to basketball games

By Kim Gibson
staff writer

Electronic readers will be used this year to allow students entrance to home basketball games.

Students planning to attend home games should make sure there is a black electronic strip on the back of their identification cards.

The electronic system will be used due to a new ruling in the NCAA requiring an accurate count of people attending basketball and football games.

An accurate count could not be made with JMU's previous system of checking ID's manually at the entrance.

The new system will "expedite and speed up the processes," said Dick Besnier, director of the Convocation Center. "It is a simpler way and should make it easier for everyone concerned."

The computer will check a student's ID, and then the student's name will be eliminated from the computer's list of students. It will allow each student to enter the game only once. The computer will keep an accurate count of attendance at games.

Four machines will be installed at the student entrance of the Convocation Center. The machines are being rented in connection with the Gibbons Hall computerized system.

Besnier said the computerized system probably will be used at home football games next year.

Some commuter students might not have a valid ID. ID's issued to commuter students before this semester or to students without meal contracts might not be acceptable.

Full-time students who need a valid ID can get one free at Entrance 7 of Gibbons Dining Hall Mondays through Fridays from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m..

This does not apply to students who have lost their ID's.

Dick Besnier, Convocation Center director: "It is a simpler way and should make it easier for everyone concerned."

UVa scholar gives poetry presentation

A lyrical poet read writings based on his life in a lecture Tuesday sponsored by the Visiting Scholars Program.

Gregory Orr read selections from his three books, which he compared to concentric rings of water. The rings represent his emotional growth.

Orr grew up in the 1960s when "Those who weren't taking drugs sounded as if they were," he said.

He lived in an isolated rural area. At 12, he killed a younger brother in a deer hunting accident. The trauma inspired much of Orr's poetry.

The poet read a seven-poem elegy for his brother.

Lyric poets write short poems to stress intensity and clarity. Orr said he puts together a series of poems

"using whatever structure or excuse I can come up with."

Orr is an associate professor, Poet in Residence and Creative Writing Program director at the University of Virginia.

Build a better body week to be held

"Build a Better Body" is the theme for Health Week to be held Nov. 7 to 11.

Nutritional evaluations of food, weight room demonstrations and skin fold tests and other activities will be held in the Warren Campus Center from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. daily.

Dr. Marjorie Christiansen, home economics professor, will speak about weight loss and gain on Monday at 7:15 p.m. in the Purple and Gold Room in Godwin Hall.

Sharon Buckner, from the Dairy Council of Virginia, will speak about fad diets at 4 p.m. Tuesday in Room B in the WCC.

Randy Nutter, a JMU senior and Nautilus instructor, will give a weight room demonstration Tuesday at 7 p.m. in the second floor weight room in Godwin Hall.

Karen Brown, a JMU junior and aerobics teacher, will talk on proper ways to exercise Thursday at 6 p.m. in the Purple and Gold Room.

The week is sponsored by a dynamics senior health class and Eta Sigma Gamma, a health honorary society.

Events are free. No registration is necessary.

Executive lecture series starts today

The first Executive Lecture Series sponsored by the School of Business will be held today and Friday.

Dr. Darrell Piersol, a retired IBM executive, will conduct a seminar today on "Life and Career Planning" at 7:30 p.m. in Chandler Hall.

At 8 a.m. and 10:00 a.m. Friday he will speak to Business Management classes in Harrison Hall, Room A-12. At noon, he will lecture to an Organizational Communication class.

The lectures are open to the public.

"The main goal of the series is to increase the interaction between School of Business students and faculty and area business practitioners," said Dr. Robert Holmes, dean of the School of Business.

Non-student charged with larceny

By Sandy Stone
police reporter

A non-student was arrested by campus police Saturday and charged with larceny.

Michael Hogle, 19, of Harrisonburg was arrested about 2:15 a.m. near Huffman Hall after allegedly stealing a local delivery man's money bag, police said.

Police would not say how much cash was in the bag.

A Four-Star Pizza delivery man, who is a student here, had parked a delivery car on the service drive behind Huffman while delivering a pizza to a nearby dorm.

When the delivery man returned to the car and opened the door, Hogle allegedly attacked him and grabbed the money bag out of his hand.

The delivery man threw Hogle on the ground, and grabbed the money bag from Hogle, police alleged. Hogle got up and started running, police alleged. But the delivery man ran after Hogle.

Campus police officers heard shouting and yelling, and saw the two men running between Huffman and Dingledine halls. Officers ran after Hogle and apprehended him.

Hogle also was served a trespass notice, police said. A trespass notice prohibits the person to whom it's issued from returning to the JMU campus.

A trespass notice is issued to someone "who's been hanging around in a suspicious manner, and really has no reason for being here," a police spokesman said.

If a person violates a trespass notice, the person then will be arrested and charged with trespassing, the spokesman said.

Vandalism

► A group of 10 to 12 men reportedly vandalized a sorority house early Friday morning, police said.

A sorority member reported that the men ran through the Alpha Gamma Delta sorority house on Greek Row about 2:30 a.m. and broke bottles, sprayed shaving cream on walls and poured muddy water and tobacco juice on the floor.

About 3:30 a.m. the same morning, the group of men were seen outside the sorority house throwing objects at the front door of the house. The men then were seen running into a fraternity house on Greek Row.

Police would not specify into which fraternity house the men ran.

Earlier that morning — about 2 a.m. — a sliding glass door panel was shattered in the Alpha Gamma Delta recreation room. Someone had kicked in the panel, police said. Police said they do not know if the same men were involved in that incident.

No arrests have been made, but a police spokesman said, "We have leads on them, and we know where they went. We're pursuing the investigation, and making some headway."

Drunken driving charged

Two students were arrested and charged with drunken driving Sunday.

► David Stanton, 20, of Haddonfield, N.J., was arrested about 1:50 a.m. near the Port Republic Road entrance to JMU, police said.

► John Durkin, 19, of Virginia Beach was arrested about 2:25 a.m. in H parking lot behind Harrison Hall, police said.

Public drunkenness charged

Two non-students were arrested and charged with public drunkenness Sunday.

► John Stanton, 26, of Haddonfield, N.J., was arrested about 2 a.m. near the Port Republic Road entrance to JMU, police said.

Stanton also was charged with resisting arrest, police said.

► David Smarrelli, 20, of Silver Spring, Md., was arrested about 3:20 a.m. in L-lot beside Hoffman Hall, police said.

Harrisonburg police recently made the following arrests:

A student was arrested and charged Oct. 24 with possession of marijuana, drunken driving and refusal to take a blood alcohol content or breath test.

Michael Arkoian, 21, of Clifton, Va., was arrested about 1:50 a.m. on Main Street.

► A student was arrested and charged with drunken driving and possession of marijuana Oct. 27.

George Riggs, 20, of Lynchburg was arrested about 5 a.m. on South Main Street.

Public drunkenness charged

A student was arrested and charged with public drunkenness Oct. 21.

► Mark Waller, 20, of Richmond was arrested about 11:55 p.m. at South Main and Paul streets.

PUNK

'We're more

Article by Gwen Fariss
Photos by Yo Nagaya

Hand-in-hand, they walk across campus in tough military attire and half-inch hairstyles that evoke stares, points and sneers wherever they go.

Some people have the ability to capture attention. At JMU, punk-rock couple Joe Fox and Kathy Russell do just that.

But man is more than image, and they are more than punks. Too often people don't take time to know the characters behind that look.

Passing peers, intrigued with the couple's appearance, display several reactions — the most common being "surprise and shock," said 21-year-old Kathy. Another is curiosity, said her partner Joe, also 21. "They would like to know what our deal is. They say 'How can they dress that way?'"

The answer — "We like punk rock. We like the music and the clothes and we dress up," Joe said.

And with their image, wide-spread recognition has followed.

"I was just becoming another faceless person. Now they definitely know who I am," Kathy said. Joe feels the same effect. "I can't walk around on campus without someone saying 'There's that guy again.'"

Such reactions may be justifiable. "We do dress pretty nasty sometimes," Joe admitted.

By the time people get used to one look, Joe and Kathy have changed. In the past year alone, Kathy has worn at least six different hairstyles. Joe's appearance changes just as frequently.

In the past month, each have undergone another metamorphosis. Kathy cast aside a striped-blond-and-brown look to display a new red hairstyle — much like the Eurythmics' Annie Lennox. Joe has altered his ROTC look to a Yul Brenner skinhead.

"I think we frighten people. They don't know what we're gonna do," Joe said.

For example, in July they entered the local United Virginia Bank. All of Joe's hair had been cut — except for a three-colored stripe about three inches long that sprouted from the forehead to the nape of his neck.

Why — "The whole philosophy behind it is forcing people to look at us. They would like to know what our deal is. They say, 'How can they dress that normal than most people.'

Appearance — "We have the self-confidence to be ourselves."

Tellers were astonished. "They looked at us like 'Oh my God.' I'm sure they all had their fingers on the button," said Joe, laughing.

Discovering their intent to open a bank account, however, the tellers were friendlier. "But they had misconceptions before."

Kathy and Joe have experienced many such occasions since they became a couple almost a year ago. The two unexpectedly united last October at a new wave dance contest at JM's Pub and Deli. Joe had decided to ask another girl to be his partner when he saw Kathy walking from the gym. He asked her instead.

Part of the attraction was her appearance, he said. That night they entered JM's "skanked out" in their finest punk attire.

She arrived in a kilt, a cut-off T-shirt, short black jacket, athletic socks, combat boots and an overcoat. He wore ripped jeans, a T-shirt, black studded jacket and engineer boots.

But they walked away that night with much more — second place prize and a future together.

The two have come a long way since then — and some of the going has been rough. They were separated from January to May last year when Kathy traveled to London.

"It was awful. We were both depressed," Kathy said. Joe also recalls those months.

"Oh God, it was horrible. It was hard. I missed her a lot," he said.

Each spent their share of time on the phone, but it was never enough. "I'd call from an international phone," Kathy said. "We'd talk for a minute and then (I'd) realize he was 2,000 miles away."

Each conversation would be halted by an operator who signaled the end too soon.

But the couple survived the separation and now share a home with four friends in a dwelling on South Mason Street, further illustrating their belief that appearance is not everything. It too, is a reflection of their own style.

A gray sign, bearing the words, "The Skankhouse" hangs in a corner of the porch, greeting visitors walking up the front steps.

Inside, the living room is modestly furnished, its focal point — a nude mannequin standing in a corner. The kitchen displays the normal college clutter.

Three couches arranged on the porch characterize their hospitality. "We have a lot of spontaneous parties. I like people to feel like they can come crash," Joe said.

And "if someone comes to our party and doesn't wear boots, or wears an Izod, I just say 'You've got an open mind.' If they come here and give us a chance, we'll give them a chance," he said.

That chance is what the couple wants. "The whole philosophy behind it is forcing people to look at us. At first they may be repulsed. Then they say we're . . . normal. It opens up their minds," said Joe.

Aside from their striking appearance, these two typify JMU students. Joe works after hours as a cook at the Belle Meade Restaurant and Lounge. Kathy is a member of the rugby team.

"I would say we're more normal than most people," said Kathy. "We have the self-confidence to be ourselves — to dress any way we want and not worry about what other people are going to think."

But misconceptions disturb the couple. "A lot of people have the opinion that punk-rockers are stupid," Kathy said. "But grades are important to me."

An English major, she studies between two and three hours each night to maintain a 3.2 average.

Joe, a political science major, admits that grades aren't as important to him, although he maintains a 2.7 average. His study habits? "I don't," he admitted with a grin.

For the future, Joe predicted punk will wane as more people turn toward new wave. But punk will never die.

"Punk is an attitude. Even if punk goes away, the people will still be here with that attitude. It will force a different way to express it," Joe said.

As seniors, both are looking to the future as individuals. "We won't be punks for the rest of our lives," said Joe. "I'm pretty realistic. I know I can't get a job wearing spike boots. I'll conform — with no regrets really. It's not gonna change my attitude. My appearance will, but what does that mean? I can wear an alligator but still feel the same."

Kathy agreed. "I'll be dressing more fashionably. I'll still be the same way, I'll just look a little different."

And what does the future hold for them as a couple? Each is unsure, though they agree they are not ready for marriage. But if with time the two drift apart, Kathy said, "It won't be because we don't love each other; it'll be because of circumstance."

All is quiet for a moment. Then they exchange a quick kiss.

Future — "I know I can't get a job wearing spike boots. I'll conform — with no regrets really."

Music seminar begins Friday

By Scott Babcock
staff writer

If you are interested in music production, marketing, management, trends, laws, songwriting or in making your rock band more popular, the Music Industry Conference is for you.

"The Two Sides of the Music Business," the theme for the conference beginning tomorrow, could well be called "The Many Sides of the Music Industry," or even "Music or Business, Something for Everybody."

The two-day conference will feature guest lecturers, seminars and a panel discussion.

Richard Barnet, coordinator of the event, said, "This is not something just for music management majors. It is for communication arts majors, business majors and people in marketing."

The conference begins at 3 p.m. Friday with a panel discussion in Wilson Hall Auditorium. "D.J.'s Panel: Why they pick the music they play," will be the discussion topic and will feature disc jockeys and program directors from area radio stations. Dr. Joseph Estock, head of the JMU department of music, will be moderator.

Questions for five panelists will include, "Who determines what will become a hit — the record companies or radio broadcasters? How are new records introduced to radio stations?" and "How do you determine opinions and preferences of your music listeners?"

After the panel discussion, a banquet for the participants will be held at 7 p.m. The price of the banquet is not included in the registration fee, but students with meal contracts can knock off $4 of the $6 meal.

Saturday, Nov. 5, the conference will continue with a series of seminars featuring four specialists from the music industry. R. David Ludwick, Merlin Littlefield, Geoff Parker and Richard Barnet are each experienced professionals and will speak on their area of expertise.

Ludwick, an attorney, is the senior partner in a major law firm in Nashville. This law firm is unique in that it is devoted to entertainment industry laws.

"If you wanted a question and answer session with Ludwick, it could cost you $1,000 or more. (The conference is) like getting free law and music advice from these guys," Barnet said.

Littlefield, associate director of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers (ASCAP), has held many prominent positions in the industry. He is credited with finding the award-winning song "The Gambler," sung by Kenny Rogers.

Parker started his career as a music critic for the Boston Globe and has written articles for many prominent music magazines. He has been a talent agent, an entertainment director, a representative for ASCAP and has worked in public relations and publicity. He is currently an assistant professor of commercial music at Georgia State University.

Barnet, who coordinates the music management program at JMU, teaches six courses and has had extensive experience with both sides of the music industry. He has performed with Chuck Mangione, has arranged songs for Roy Rogers and has served as performer, writer, conductor or in production with some of the top names in the music business.

As a specialist in marketing the performing group, he will speak at the final seminar, "Marketing Yourself: The Performing Artist or Group."

During the eight seminars Saturday, "no recording devices will be allowed in the seminars," said Barnet, "because these guys want to speak openly and honestly. They want to tell it like it is, which may mean they'll have to say, 'It may be illegal, but . . .'"

There will be a long lunch break on Saturday to allow the participants of the conference to speak to the guest lecturers.

The conference is being coordinated by the Music Industry Association of JMU. The association consists of music management majors, communication arts majors and business majors.

"This is the biggest thing for the next five years that this organization will do," said Barnet, adviser for the association.

The conference cost for those who did not register before Oct. 31 is $35 or $25 with a JMU ID.

Discounts are available for groups or clubs of eight or more. Bands can get in for $40. For more information, contact Richard Barnet at 433-6987 or 433-6197.

Wampler musical opens

"Out of the Reach of Children," a musical by Cornelia Ravenal, opens tonight at Wampler Experimental Theatre.

The production deals with five friends and their lives through high school and college. Its theme concerns the general topics of finding yourself, growing up and dreams.

The musical premiered at the New Playwrights' Theatre in Washington, D.C.

The all-female cast have all had experience in other JMU productions.

The role of Patty is played by senior Barb Shufelt and Annette Fama, a junior, plays Marion. Junior Sarah Motes plays Ellen, sophomore Cynthia Watkins plays Thea and junior Karen Blakely plays Laura.

The musical is directed by Wendy McNeny, also a JMU student. Dance Professor Kate Trammell did the choreography for this production.

Showtimes are 8 p.m. Thursday and continue at 8 p.m. through Sunday at Wampler Theatre. Admission is $2.

The JMU Fine Arts Series Presents

The New Swingle Singers

at 8p.m., Monday, Nov. 7 in Wilson Hall

The eight-member group, known for vocal technique and precise harmony, will perform music by John Lennon, Paul McCartney, Bach, Mozart, and Hammers-tein. Featured will be 'The Flight of the Bumble Bee' by Rimsky-Korsakov, 'Fascinatin' Rhythm' by Gershwin, 'What Are You Doing for the Rest of Your Life?' by Legrand and 'Clair de Lune' by Debussy.

Tickets for JMU faculty, staff, and students are available from the information desk, Warren Campus Center and the office of the dean, School of Fine Arts and Communication in Room 2, Anthony-Seeger Hall. General admission tickets are $4 and are available from Charles Mathias, downtown, Centerpoint Bookstore, Valley Mall, and the dean's office. For information, call 433-6472 weekdays.

Wallyball: New sport growing fast

By Fitz Rogers
staff writer

Imagine eight people running around a racquetball court trying to kill each other with a volleyball. Fun? You bet it is. This is wallyball.

Wallyball concludes its first year as an intramural sport at JMU next week, with many people still wondering what it is and where it came from.

Two teams of at least four players, using four walls, a net and a round inflated ball make up the game. It is very similar to volleyball except players play the ball off the walls.

The sport originated in California approximately five years ago and has been growing in popularity ever since.

George Toliver, director of intramurals, first heard about wallyball at a conference and thought it would be ideal for the intramural system.

Toliver said he likes to incorporate "good participation sports" in the intramural program, and wallyball certainly falls into that category. As the ball ricochets off the walls, every player gets chances to play the ball.

This year, approximately 55 teams signed up to play.

The playoffs began on Tuesday. Six men's, two women's and two championship division teams carry undefeated records into the playoffs.

Eventually, racquetball players may have to fight for a court because wallyball is coming on strong at JMU.

JMU falls to UVa

Serving hurts Dukes in home finale

By Scott Tolley
staff writer

Poor serving and poor defense overshadowed the offensive efforts of sophomore Kathy Mendel as the volleyball team lost to the University of Virginia in its final home match Tuesday night.

JMU coach Deb Tyson said a complete breakdown in serve reception and inconsistent serving hurt the Dukes (16-25) as the Cavaliers beat them in straight games 15-12, 15-7, 17-15.

"We figured it up and the team got in only 56 percent of their serves, and you can't even stay in a volleyball game without serving," Tyson said.

One bright spot for JMU was the offensive play of Mendel. After injuring her right knee during the JMU Invitational at the beginning of October, Mendel returned to the line-up two weeks ago in a tri-match at Virginia Commonwealth University.

Tyson said Mendel has recovered from her injury and has recently taken on the role of team leader.

In the first game of the match, JMU jumped out to a 9-4 lead. Virginia rallied with six straight points behind the serving of Kari Westervelt to take a 10-9 lead.

Virginia jumped out to a 5-0 lead and easily won the second game, but the Dukes gave the Cavaliers a battle in the third.

After falling behind 4-1, JMU tied the score at four on the serve on freshman Sandy Heinbach. Virginia went up 6-4, but two spikes and a dink by Mendel gave JMU a 7-6 lead.

JMU fell behind again, 9-7, before rallying for a 10-9 lead in the seesaw battle. The teams traded leads again before tying at 13.

A spike by Mendel gave the serve to JMU and a service ace by senior Val Martel gave the Dukes a 14-13 lead.

JMU couldn't put the game away and Virginia scored twice for a 15-14 lead. JMU tied the score at 15 before finally losing 17-15.

"We had one goal tonight and that was to win," Tyson said.

Tyson added that setting a goal of just winning was something she had never done before as a coach.

"The team has lacked that winning drive," Tyson said. "The team has looked at injuries and a lack of personnel as obstacles. The team needs to realize that they have to make the best out of whatever they have."

The Dukes have an away match and an away tournament left on their schedule before the Virginia Intercollegiate League championships Nov. 12-13.

"The VIL's are what we are really shooting for," Tyson said. "Defense will be our main concentration and we'll work on serving consistently and more aggressively."

Wrestlers open with tourney

Many of JMU's freshman wrestlers will be wrestling for the first time in college when the JMU Takedown Tournament begins Saturday morning.

Unlike upcoming tournaments in which the Dukes will be up against national powers such as Nebraska and Lehigh, the Takedown Tournament is designed to give the younger wrestlers pressure-free college experience.

"There's not too many times we can just have fun," JMU Coach Dick Besnier said.

The University of Virginia, VMI, Virginia Tech, George Mason University, George Washington University, Longwood College, and Western Maryland University will also field teams in the tournament.

The wrestlers in the tournament will be restricted to takedowns and pins.

The tournament will begin at 9 a.m. in Godwin Hall and it will be Besnier's first chance to see his younger wrestlers perform in competition. The Dukes are trying to replace Dan Corbin (29-7-1) and Bob Char-michael (23-13-1) who graduated from last year's 8-5-1 team.

JMU's top returning letterman is Tony Gentile, who Besnier said "might be the best wrestler we've ever had." Gentile was 21-8-0 before being injured last season.

The Dukes will have six other returners who won 16 or more matches last season.

"It's just like anything else," Besnier said, "If we can avoid injuries we'll be alright."

Bet on visitors this weekend

By Rhett Butler
staff columnist

Last week, I bet on eight games and won six. I correctly predicted the upsets of North Carolina and the L.A. Raiders raising my record for the year to 29-15, making my season total plus $250.

This week I will go with the road teams: Maryland, Clemson, Cincinnati, Miami, and the Raiders.

Maryland (plus 7½) at Auburn

Auburn is ranked third in the nation, Maryland seventh. The networks are missing out on a good show by overlooking this one. The Terps' defense should slow down the Auburn running game and keep it closer than a touchdown. $40 on Maryland.

Clemson (plus 7½) at North Carolina

Clemson is a solid team which hasn't lost to the Tar Heels in three years. They struggled early in the year, but still they find a way to win. Carolina has yet to prove themselves. $40 on Clemson.

L.A. Raiders (minus 3½) at Kansas City

The Raiders have become quite unpredictable. They've made 28 turnovers in the last five games, and it's tough to win in the NFL when you can't hold onto the ball. Sunday's game against the Chiefs will be a good time for Al Davis' boys to get it together. The Chiefs only run the ball for 73.3 yards per game, and the Raiders love to exploit that kind of weakness. Look for the Raiders, behind a big day from Marcus Allen, to win easily. $50 on the Raiders.

Cincinnati(3½) at Houston

The Bengals are better than their 3-6 record indicates. They, like everyone else on the Houston schedule, want to avoid the embarrassment of losing to the lowly Oilers, who are as bad as their 0-9 record indicates. Without Ken Anderson, the Bengals have won two in a row. It looks like they are back on track. $50 on Cincinnati.

Miami (plus 2½) at San Francisco

Don Shula's Dolphins haven't lost since rookie sensation Dan Marino took over at quarterback. Miami just doesn't make mistakes and capitalize on their opponents' mistakes. The 49ers were brought back down to earth when the Jets shut down their high-anxiety air show and defeated them 27-13. This will be a fun game to watch, but smart money is on Shula. $50 on Miami.

St. Louis (plus 10) at Washington

St. Louis is coming off its biggest win of the season (41-31 over the Vikings). The Redskins, on the other hand, looked bad Monday against the Chargers. They also woke up Tuesday with a slew of injuries. The Skins haven't been able to stop the pass all year. Until they do, $50 on St. Louis.

Seattle (plus 7) at Los Angeles Raiders

With Curt Warner, Jim Zorn and Steve Largent, the Seahawks can play anyone close. Oakland won a thriller Sunday night. If they let down Seattle could pull an upset. Regardless, the Seahawks should come within seven points. $40 on Seattle.

Season's record	29-15
Last week's results	plus $200
Season's total	plus $250
Money on hand	plus $750

Hockey team loses to VCU

Virginia Commonwealth University handed the field hockey team a 1-0 loss here Tuesday in the JMU's last regular-season game.

"VCU scored in the first half and sat on a 1-0 lead in the second half," said JMU coach Dee McDonough.

The Dukes finished the regular season with an 11-8-1 record and went into Tuesday's game ranked 17th in the NCAA Division I poll.

The team plays in the Virginia Intercollegiate League championships this weekend at the College of William and Mary.

The loss to VCU will have an effect on the where the Dukes are seeded in this weekend's tournament. Prior to Tuesday, JMU had only one loss to a VIL team — Old Dominion. But now is 2-2-1 against VIL opponents.

VCU scored 20:36 in to the first half. Despite outshooting the Rams 4-1 in the second half, JMU could not tie the game.

"It's not that we did things badly," said McDonough. "we just couldn't get the ball in the net."

— Linda Manelski

Soccer

JMU's chances of finishing with a .500 season were thwarted yesterday afternoon as they suffered a 1-0 overtime loss here to Loyola (Md.) College.

Craig Callinan scored with 4:42 left in the second overtime period off a free kick just inside the JMU goal box.

The Dukes fell to 5-7-2 with their final game here Sunday against the College of William and Mary. Loyola, ranked 18th nationally, improved its record to 14-2 with its sixth straight win.

Loyola goalkeeper Bryan McPhee, who was selected by the Baltimore Blast in last week's Major Indoor Soccer League's draft, recorded his 10th shutout in 16 starts this year.

— Paul Bergeron

Men's swimming

Senior captains Stuart Burdette and Ken Browne will lead the JMU in its 1983-84 season, which opened last weekend in the sixth annual JMU Invitational Relays.

The relays were a non-scoring event held Saturday in Savage Natatorium.

Burdette, a freestyle sprinter, and Browne, a freestyle distance swimmer, are two of 11 returning lettermen competing for JMU coach Charles Arnold.

Top freshmen include Mike Dreisch in the breaststroke, Chris Keoughan in the backstroke and Eric Smitherman in the breaststroke.

JMU opens its dual meet season Saturday at Duke University. The first home meet will be Nov. 12 against Clarion University, a perennial Division II power.

Men's basketball

JMU will hold an intra-squad scrimmage Friday in the Convocation Center.

The scrimmage will be played under controlled game conditions and will be open to the public. Starting time is 5:45 p.m.

The Dukes also will play the Palmetto Stars Sunday Nov. 13 in their final public appearance before opening the season Nov. 26 at home against the University of North Carolina-Greensboro.

The Palmetto Stars are affiliated with the Amateur Athletic Union (AAU) and are based in Columbia, S.C. The team, composed of former college players, was 30-5 last year.

The game will be played at 3:30 p.m. Tickets are available for non-students in the JMU athletic ticket office in the Convocation Center.

Men's cross country

The men's cross country team will conclude its season Saturday at the inaugural ECAC South Championship meet in Richmond.

The Dukes will join East Carolina, George Mason, Navy, William and Mary, and host Richmond in the five-mile race.

JMU placed ninth out of 15 teams last weekend in the 15th annual Penn State Open.

Senior Mark Nichols was the team's top finisher. He was 42nd out of nearly 200 runners.

Freshmen George Fitch and Jeff Mott, finished 43rd and 46th, respectively.

Gary Clark

Too small for basketball, and too good to be true

The Breeze

November 3, 1983, page 15

By Steve Lockard
sports editor

Gary Clark says he always wanted to play basketball, but he just didn't have the size.

"Basketball is my love, but I was just too short," says Clark, JMU's All-America split end.

So Clark had to settle for football — a sport where he lets everyone else worry about his 5-foot-11, 167-pound frame.

"It didn't really phase me. Then I started talking to reporters and they'd say, 'You're not all that big,' and I'd say, 'Yea, I guess you're right.'"

"If you have the tools to put with it, size doesn't really matter."

Gary Clark certainly has the tools. "Excellent speed and acceleration," said JMU wide receiver coach Joe Carico.

"As good as I've ever coached," JMU coach Challace McMillin said. "He's the best overall athlete that we've had."

He has been timed at 4.41 in the 40-yard dash. Combine that with good hands and excellent moves, Clark is what is known as a "gamebreaker."

"I think, along with the help of my teammates, I can really make things happen," Clark says.

He has done just that. With three game left in his final season here, Clark has rewritten the JMU record books. He has set 12 school marks this year and he holds a total of 20 receiving, kick return and scoring records.

He currently has 46 receptions (tying his season record) and 718 yards in receiving — "on target" for his goal of 60 catches and 1,000 yards.

"It's been like a dream come true," Clark says of his JMU career.

But there was a time, not so long ago, that Clark's life at JMU wasn't so dream-like.

"When I was a freshman and sophomore I was ready to go home. I was saying this wasn't for me."

With the help of his family, he overcame his homesickness.

"They said things were going to get better, and sure enough they did."

Carico said, "The difference between Gary now and when he was a freshman is hard to describe. He is much more mature. He's a leader and the players look up to him."

The leader role hasn't come easily for Clark, a co-captain on this year's squad.

"I was a shy guy," he says, obviously cured. "The last three years I didn't say much. Now I think I have more responsibility as captain. I'm not a yelling guy, but I can be rah-rah if it helps the team."

If Clark was shy when he arrived at JMU, it didn't show on the football field. He was an immediate starter as a freshman, leading the Dukes with 23 receptions.

"It was a shock to me," he says about starting so soon. "I just wanted to come in and make the traveling squad. From then on, good things . . . have happened."

As a sophomore, Clark led JMU with 29 receptions. Last year, he caught a school-record 46 passes and was ranked second in Division I-AA in punt returns with a 14.9 yard average.

And then came the attention. Clark was named Offensive Player of the Year in Virginia by the Roanoke Times and World-News, selected honorable mention

All-America by the Associated Press and The Sporting News, and was voted JMU's Most Valuable Player by his teammates.

The attention Clark has received has not been limited to awards. Scouts have shown great interest in his ability to play professionally.

"He'll be drafted," says Joe DiMarzo, a scout for National Football Scouting — a service used by 17 National Football League teams.

DiMarzo, who attended the JMU-Delaware game last Saturday for the sole purpose of watching Clark, said he likes "the way he beats people deep and his running ability in the open field."

Clark admits that professional football is something that is on his mind.

"I think about it, but I try to keep myself from thinking about it," Clark says, adding that he doesn't have any preference between the NFL or the United States Football League right now.

"I'll have to sit down and consider the financial aspects. Right now all I want to do is go out with a winning record."

And with that statement, a look of frustration crosses Clark's face. He, as much as anyone, has felt the pain of the Dukes' 3-5 season. He has had to adjust to four different quarterbacks and has played the last half of the year with a nagging ankle injury, and more recently, a pulled groin muscle.

"It's been very hard," says Clark, who said the 26-23 loss to Delaware was as difficult as any.

"After the last game I was totally drained. I was saying 'What is wrong with us?' 'What is wrong with me?'"

"Why can't we put it together and win?"

Clark says that football is just a part of his life.

"Some guys think football night and day. I'm not like that. I can't say that I love it. I enjoy it like I enjoy playing basketball or listening to music."

Clark is a social science major with a minor in psychology, and when all this football stuff is over, he thinks he might like to teach.

"Maybe history," he says with a smile that reveals that teaching may have to wait a while.

20/20 hindsight An October review

Here's a quick glance back at October's happenings:

► Revised Housing Plan Approved — A revised plan for a $9 million Greek housing complex across Interstate 81 cleared one hurdle when it was OK'd by the JMU Board of Visitors.

The original plan called for 20 units housing 40 people each. Under the new plan, 22 units housing 30 people each might be built if approved by the Virginia General Assembly this winter.

► Name Dropping — The names of faculty members receiving merit pay will be published in the Faculty Senate minutes as well as within each department.

Faculty members will now know whom receives merit pay, but students will still be left in the dark. Fred Hilton, assistant to the vice president for university relations, rejected a Faculty Senate request that the names of recipients be published in JMNNews, calling the situation a personnel matter.

► No Drinking? — The Faculty Senate has requested that alcohol be prohibited from the graduation ceremony.

► No Handshaking? — An ad hoc committee studying possible changes in the graduation format might eliminate the time-consuming tradition of students' shaking President Carrier's.

► Budget Crisis — Governor Robb ordered all state agencies to cut their budgets by 1.5 percent, meaning JMU would have to trim $300,000 from its budget next semester.

Already hurt by a Robb-ordered 5-percent cut this summer, JMU pondered a tuition surcharge to offset the loss. But again Robb intervened, prohibiting universities from making up the difference through tuition increases.

President Carrier now says the quality of education here is being threatened because of inadequate state funding...

► Disappointing — October was disastrous for the once nationally ranked JMU football team.

They entered the month with three wins against one loss, but dropped all four October games.

The above editorial was written by Ross Richardson, The Breeze's editorial editor. It is the opinion of Richardson, Editor Ian Katz, Managing Editor Daniel Finnegan and Assistant Editorial Editor Cay Fultz.

Opinions in Viewpoint and Readers' Forum are not necessarily those of the students, faculty or staff of JMU.

Halloween '83: Scary and confusing

This Halloween was perhaps the most frightening I've ever seen.

No, not because I visited Lambda Chi's haunted house or because I found pins and needles in my Halloween candy. No, my biggest scare this Halloween came when I read Monday's Washington Post.

The world is, to quote the Temptations, "a ball of confusion" these days and I'm not sure I can handle the strain.

For instance, the U.S. military is spread around the world thinner than hair on James Watt's head.

In Grenada, our marines are shooting, in El Salvador our marines are training peasants to shoot, and in Beirut our marines are sitting around waiting to be shot by peasants.

All of this results from the foreign policy of President Reagan, a man whose main military and political experience was the starring role in "Hellcats of the Navy."

Maybe I'm just getting too much caffeine, but everything that's been going on has left me dazed and confused.

I wonder if the health center prescribes valium.

As if it isn't bad enough to have an actor for a president, consider the fact that our next one could very well be either an astronaut, George McGovern, or a man named Fritz.

Maybe if I tried EST or meditation I could handle all this.

Lost and Found

By TIM ARNOLD

And to top that off, America has finally progressed enough to the point where a black man, Jesse Jackson, mounts a valid campaign for the presidency, but nearly every black politician in the country opposes his candidacy.

It's probably because Jesse makes too much sense to be president.

Sometimes I think that whoever is in charge of this world doesn't have all his checkers on the board.

Even at JMU things have gone haywire. For one thing, when I graduate, I probably won't even be allowed to shake President Carrier's hand.

Was it something I said or what?

They say the graduation ceremony is too long. Hey, these are college students we're talking about, and we've been waiting in line and been bored by professors for four years — surely we can handle a few more hours.

But the straw that broke the camel's back and pushed me over the edge came just as I was beginning to recover from Monday morning's headlines. Looking up at the calendar I realized that it was the last day of October.

That means 1984, the year of Orwell's nightmarish distopia, is only 61 days away.

Let me see, where did I put the phone number for the counseling center.

Airplay

WMRA not 'an acceptable forum for students'

To the editor:

During my stay at JMU I have found our "campus" radio station to be generally unresponsive to the student body it supposedly serves.

I do not feel WMRA acts as an acceptable forum for students to express their feelings. I feel this should be a top priority in this type of environment, especially for a university-sponsored project.

One of the sad truths I have encountered while discussing this topic with others is that many students are unaware the station exists. For the majority of students, it only exists during away football and basketball games.

As far as the music selection WMRA plays, I was shocked the first time I heard it, as are many other students. While many colleges and universities across the nation are giving airplay to new and innovative types of music as well as student favorites, WMRA simply ignores the majority of the student body.

I'm sorry WMRA, but Harrisonburg's radio stations are simply too bland and commercial to offer any alternative.

My proposal is not to employ a no-holds-barred rock station but to be more responsive to the needs of the student body. I realize the station just sold all of their records but that should not prove to be an obstacle.

Case in point: At WVCW, VCU's campus station, the announcers are students trained in the same manner as the JMU DJs, however, unlike JMU they are allowed to play their own records (subject to approval).

I believe this could prove beneficial in two ways. First, it would create an interest in the field of broadcasting and provide a learning experience for many students. Second, it would obviously better serve the student population that has been neglected for too long.

I would like to see these proposals seriously taken into account and hope to see the implementation of them at least over a portion of the airplay. I also urge all students to let WMRA, our station, know how we feel.

Will Croxton

political science

Jim Miskimen, general manager of WMRA, said WMRA is not a campus station but a certified national public radio station with 19,500 watt program and a potential audience of about 40,000. JMU is a large part of this audience, but the station cannot cater completely to the university.

Quiet!

Library noisy, overcrowded

To the editor:

I'm very angry. This will be obvious by the time you've finished reading my editorial. I've just walked out of the library after looking 10 minutes for a place to study. There wasn't one. Even worse, most people in the library weren't studying.

The library has become a place to socialize. Was JM's too crowded? The school would make a fortune if beer were served at the circulation desk.

I can't blame the staff because no one needs to tell college students to shut up or leave.

The students causing the shortage of space and abundance of noise should be embarrassed. They're the people who hit the sides of their plates with their spoons when someone else drops something on the floor. Mr. Moody can't help us anymore.

Maybe we could solve this problem (the library one, anyway) by disguising the union as the library and tell people the library has been moved. Hopefully, this would fool people and the real library would enjoy more space and silence.

Another solution would be to ask faculty to become more difficult and assign more work, or we could all go elsewhere to socialize and use the library for its intended purposes.

Fourteen Lines for the American and French Dead
— Beirut, October 1983

Come back, and leave dying for lost causes to men already dead; let shade fight shade.
There is no need for you to die in Beirut.
You have not confessed to large purposes, to dealings in heroic lunacy, and so don't fake allegiance to reasons that will grow dim and dimmer still as more and more of you are killed by collapsing apartment houses and fragments of senseless metal.
I have dead brothers, and nephews never born, who went for as much, or so we know thirteen seasons later, now that you are too young to remember, and too poorly schooled to know that muddled Lebanon was made by the fathers of the honored dead of Dien Bien Phu.

Father treated poorly despite academic gift

To the editor:

About a year ago, my father established an academic scholarship fund in memory of my mother. This is an academic, rather than an athletic, scholarship donation. I feel he has been treated differently than he would have had it been an athletic scholarship.

My father wanted to attend Parents' Weekend and go to the football game. He missed the mailing deadline to get tickets, so he called the Development Office to see if they could help.

No problem, he was told. The tickets would be held for him on the day of the game.

It took him two trips to the ticket office to get them. We missed most of the first quarter waiting for the tickets to be "located."

When the 75th anniversary dinner rolled around last year, he was supposed to be extended an invitation. But he did not find out until two weeks after the ceremony.

Is this any way to treat someone who has donated money to this university? I hope not. Maybe it is because his donation is not directed toward the athletic program.

Don't get me wrong. I fully support the JMU athletic program. But academics are the primary reason for JMU's existence. Would you want to donate money and receive the treatment my father has received? I don't think so.

War Powers act applies to Grenada, says House

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The House of Representatives passed a War Powers resolution Tuesday requiring President Reagan to withdraw U.S. forces from Grenada before Christmas.

The vote in the House was 403-23.

The Senate approved identical wording last Friday by a 64-20 margin. However, an unrelated measure that the Senate's war powers resolution was attached to was killed. That sets up another Senate vote specifically on the War Powers issue.

A spokesman for the Senate Foreign Relations Committee said the committee would move quickly on the resolution and send it to the floor for a new vote.

Reagan, like other presidents before him, has resisted encroachment on his powers as commander-in-chief of U.S. military forces. He has not indicated whether he will veto the resolution on Grenada, which would require withdrawal of U.S. forces within 60 days of last week's invasion.

If all members were present and voting in both houses, it would require 66 votes to override a presidential veto in the Senate and 290 votes in the House.

Tire fire still burning in Winchester

WINCHESTER — State and local authorities were setting up monitoring systems Tuesday to check for air and water pollution caused by a fire set in a mound of 7 million used tires.

The fire continued to send up a column of black smoke Tuesday, although the smoke was not as heavy as the plume that smudged the sky over parts Virginia, Maryland and West Virginia.

Frederick County Sheriff Roscoe Bruce said the fire was suspicious and firefighters at the scene said they thought it was the work of arsonists. They pointed out that tires need a temperature of more than 500 degrees to ignite, and said there was almost no way they could have ignited accidentally or spontaneously.

The fire began about 1 a.m. Monday and was contained later in the day, but officials speculated it could burn into 1984.

Falwell files suit over fake advertisement

LYNCHBURG, Va. — The Rev. Jerry Falwell filed a $45 million lawsuit Monday against publisher Larry Flynt and Hustler magazine, claiming a fake advertisement intentionally damaged Falwell's reputation.

The full-page ad in the November issue of Hustler was titled "Jerry Falwell Talks About His First Time." It described what the magazine said was the evangelist's first encounter with Campari liquor and sex.

The ad included a disclaimer, "ad parody not to be taken seriously," at the bottom of the page.

Flynt, from his Los Angeles home, said he was "really tickled" about the lawsuit.

First elections in a decade held in Argentina

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina — Raul Alfonsin and the Radical Civic Union won Argentina's first general elections in a decade on Monday, replacing the ruling military government.

Alfonsin defeated a member of the Peronist Party, which has dominated national politics for 40 years.

The military government said Alfonsin, an attorney, received 7.43 million of the more than 14 million ballots cast in Sunday's elections.

Alfonsin will take control of a country reeling under an 800 percent inflation rate, a $40 billion foreign debt and bitterness over the military regime's loss of the Falkland Islands.

The government said the new leadership will take over by January 1984.
